Ship brokerage in Portland, Maine

Business records, including contracts, accounts, correspondence, and a wide variety of other documents, from the Chase, Leavitt Company of Portland, Maine. This collection touches on almost all aspects of the firm's core business of arranging logistics for ships and cargoes in Portland, as well as ancillary work with marine insurance agencies, stevedoring and longshoremen's welfare, seamen's benevolent societies, harbor development commissions, and as vessel managers, most notably as managers of the Wyoming and several other Percy & Small-built schooners. Material is not complete, but exists for limited time frames in each section. Some personal material from the Leavitt family is also here.

Foreword

This collection could not have been processed without generous financial support. The organization of the 1991 accession was made possible by the Davis Family Foundation; the arrangement of the later additions was supported by the Nathan R. Lipfert Library Stewardship Fund.

Work on this collection would also not have been possible without the help of the Museum's tireless corps of library volunteers. Volunteers contributed more than 10,000 hours over six years to sort, flatten, and rehouse the original collection; another generation contributed nearly 800 hours over the course of a year to file, index, and rehouse the later accessions. John Eric Anderson, Scott Andrews, Newell Avery, Hannah Batchelder, John E. Bowker, Jane Collins, Jerome Creedon, Gerard Dorian, Eastham Guild, Jr., Richard Hilton, Amory Houghton, Kathy Klingaman, Marty Lakeman, Marietta Lamphere, Renfield Lamphere, Lillian Lawlor, Joan Lipfert, Judi Mansfield, Mary Ellen Miller, Archibald Porter, Alice Porter, Mikell Reed, Martha Reifschneider, Jan Reynolds, Natalie Schlicht, Dan Snyder, Alan Stewart, W. Frederick Thomas, Gail Trank, and Carl E. Veazie all contributed valuable time and effort to this project.

Acquisition

This collection arrived as multiple accessions, all directly from the Chase, Leavitt Company or members of the Leavitt family. The first, largest donation came in 1991, and was almost entirely limited to material now in Series Ia. The family made two more substantial donations of correspondence, charter parties, accounts, and other business records in 2011 and 2012. The remainder of this collection was originally donated to the Portland Harbor Museum, but arrived at Maine Maritime Museum when the institutions' collections were combined in 2011.

Access Restrictions

Labor records of the Portland Shipping Association (series I Ib, boxes 448-458) are restricted and may not be viewed until 2056. The rest of the collection, including the remainder of that sub-series, has no restrictions except where the original copyright of published material may still be in force.

Physical Condition

Most of the collection is in good condition. However, much of the outgoing correspondence from the early twentieth century is on highly acidic paper, which is already quite fragile and will continue to degrade. Many less-acidic papers are also suffering from acid damage. Much of the 2011/2012 addition arrived with a significant layer of surface dirt, not all of which has been removed. Deep creases, cracks, tears, and other incidental damage can be found throughout the collection.

Processing Notes

As the Chase, Leavitt Company has been operating for more than 150 years, the firm's record-keeping and filing system has changed multiple times. As much as is reasonable, the processing of this collection preserves the company's original order of manuscript material. However, this means that similar types of documents may be filed in different places depending on the date of the material. Some major organizational schemes are outlined below.

In the nineteenth century, Chase, Leavitt Co.'s filing system was apparently based on document type. Therefore, charter parties, bills of lading, correspondence, accounts, etc., were all filed separately, even if information applied to the same vessel.

In the first decades of the twentieth century, the firm began dividing documents based on area of business. Therefore, information on apple exports was separated from information on sulfur imports, correspondence with foreign firms was divided from correspondence with domestic firms, etc. Within these subject-area boundaries, records deal fairly comprehensively with all aspects of business. One further note: for a time, William Leavitt served as an official weigher for the Union Sulphur Company in Portland. Correspondence and documents related to weighing are therefore also filed separately from the Union Sulphur Company's general correspondence with the Chase, Leavitt Co. in this period.

In the 1920s, the Chase, Leavitt Co. apparently returned to filing documents solely by document type. The correspondence from that decade, therefore, addresses all parts of both foreign and domestic business and all types of cargo, as well as the six coal schooners managed directly by the firm. For these years, incoming and outgoing correspondence was filed together under the name of the correspondent, arranged alphabetically by the name of the correspondent.

Beginning in the late 1930s, when Chase, Leavitt Co. was employed to handle a ship's affairs in port, they grouped all documents—accounts, manifests, correspondence, etc.—related to that visit together in a single file. These now form Series Ia, Ship Visit Files. In 1954, the firm started numbering these files, beginning with file #900. In 1960, they changed the numbering sequence to start with #1 and jumping to the next multiple of 100 each year on January 1 (e.g. Dec. 30, file #654; Jan. 1, file #700). The new numbering system also created some overlapping file numbers, which are distinguished by arrival date. Vessels were apparently assigned file numbers based on expected arrival date, creating occasional inconsistencies in chronological order if the vessel was delayed.

From the 1890s, on, accounts relating to normal office expenses were kept separate from accounts related to ship arrivals and other business in the port. These are now in Series If. Ledgers and accounts of the company's overall business were also kept; these are in the collection of the Maine Historical Society.

Documents related to Chase, Leavitt Co.'s involvement with marine insurance, stevedoring, harbor development projects, and other work with third-party groups also follow their own internal organization schemes, separate from the operation of the company as a whole. These are preserved in Series II.

Some notes on organization that affect the collection as a whole:

Alphabetization: in general, the Chase, Leavitt alphabetized by the first part of an individual's last name, or the beginning of a company's name. However, if a company was named after an individual (i.e., John H. Smith & Co.), documents would be filed under the principal's last name (Smith).

Organization: much of correspondence and office bills this collection arrived in file boxes containing several months to several years of material. Material was organized alphabetically or by other groupings within the file box. That organization was then repeated across multiple boxes. This repetitious system has been reproduced here as well.

Ephemera, photographs, and other media naturally accrued in many parts of this collection. Where it was easy to do so, these have been filed alongside the manuscript material they support. Photographs of damaged cargo, for instance, are filed with the relevant damage report, while architectural plans for the re-development of Long Wharf are next to correspondence on the same subject. These alternate media are usually, but not always, mentioned in the folder titles. However, not all printed or photographic items had clear relationships to manuscript material. Ephemera of this sort are filed in Series IV, while photographs are now in PC-339.

Related Materials

The Maine Historical Society also has a substantial collection of Chase, Leavitt Company records, Coll. 100. The MHS collection contains a number of document types not preserved here, including ledgers, cashbooks, and other accounts for the firm as a whole; bills, receipts and charter commissions; vessel accounts and statements of general average in bound volumes; and records of vessel surveys. A full list of material is in an appendix.

PC-339, the Chase, Leavitt Photo Collection, contains photographs that arrived with this collection that were not obviously tied to manuscript material. (Photographs that were linked to manuscripts, like images of damaged cargo, have been filed in the manuscript collection.) PC-339 primarily contains images of the South Portland Shipyard, mid-twentieth century cargo ships, and individuals associated with the maritime industry.

A letter from Chase, Leavitt Co. to Captain Alfred Patterson about the command of the barkentine John J. Marsh, which Chase, Leavitt Co. managed, is in Small Manuscripts.

Historical Note

The Chase, Leavitt Company is a ship brokerage and shipping agency in Portland, Maine, which has operated continuously from the mid-nineteenth century to the present. The firm traces its roots to 1854, when retired sea captains Charles H. Chase (1824-1897) and Charles Littlejohn founded Littlejohn & Chase, a ship brokerage at 4 Central Wharf, Portland. About the same time, Edward M. Leavitt and an unidentified partner started a similar business called Chase, Leavitt & Co., on Widgery's Wharf. The history of these two businesses over the next two decades is somewhat obscure. At some point, Charles Littlejohn retired, so that Littlejohn & Chase became Charles H. Chase & Co. Meanwhile, Edward M. Leavitt died of wounds sustained in the Civil War. In 1876, however, Charles H. Chase brought Edward's cousin, William Leavitt (1824-1911), and Tewksbury L. Sweat into his brokerage as partners, renaming the firm Chase, Leavitt Co. The company has been primarily run by the Leavitt family ever since.

As a ship brokerage, Chase, Leavitt Co. is a logistics company, handling arrangements from a cargo's point of origin onto a ship, through Portland to its destination. As agents, they represent a vessel's interests throughout its stay in Portland, from arrival to departure. They are therefore involved in all aspects of Portland's maritime business, including tugs and pilotage, ship supplies and repairs, crewing, stevedoring, cargo handling and storage, freight forwarding, customs, marine protests, and insurance. In the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, Chase, Leavitt was particularly involved in the bulk commodity trades into and out of Portland, including lumber, coal, sugar, apples, and grain, as well as cargoes of sulfur, wood-pulp, and clay for the paper industry. In the late twentieth century, these focuses have expanded to fuel oil, containers, and cruise ships; the company has also begun servicing vessels arriving in Searsport, Bucksport, Wiscasset, and Yarmouth, Maine, and in Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

Over the years, the company and its principals took on other responsibilities relating to the core shipping business. These include acting as surveyors and agents for marine insurance groups like Lloyd's and the Bureau of American and Foreign Shipping, serving as official weighers for incoming sulfur cargoes, acting as customs brokers, working with the War Shipping Administration and other federal agencies, organizing the Portland Shipping Association to administer employment benefits due to stevedores and longshoremen, and serving on a variety of maritime benevolent associations and harbor improvement commissions. The firm also sporadically took on the ownership or direct management of vessels, most notably managing A.W. Frost's fleet of large coal schooners in the 1920s. One of these schooners was the Wyoming.

As of 2019, the Chase, Leavitt Company is the oldest shipping firm on the east coast still operated by the same family. After joining the firm in 1876, William Leavitt served as president until his death in 1911. His son, William Leavitt Jr. (1864-1926) joined the firm in 1882, succeeded his father as president, and served until 1926. Ralph Ames Leavitt (1898-1977), William Jr.'s son, joined the company in 1918 and was president until 1965, when his son, a third William Leavitt (1928-2015) succeeded him. Today, Jonathan Ames Leavitt (b. 1959) and Alison Leavitt (b. 1962) are the fifth generation involved.

Scope and Content Note

This collection contains records of most aspects of the Chase, Leavitt Company's business from 1873 to 2002. It is therefore also a wide-ranging record of the maritime history of Portland, Maine, from the flows of global commerce to the minutiae of dock labor. Records are incomplete and many years are missing entirely for one area or another, but the extant material still provides a detailed look at changes in the maritime world and the logistics of shipping for nearly a century and a half.

Because of the comprehensive nature of the ship brokerage business, this collection deals with a wide variety of topics. The vast web of commercial relationships centered on Portland is documented through correspondence, charter parties, and shipping documents that span a century and a quarter. These also lay out the variety of vessels and cargoes flowing into the port. The mechanics of the maritime world—labor, infrastructure, materials, and ships, and the interactions between them—are also documented in detail in Series I. Other, more focused topics covered in depth include a century of urban development focused on the harbor (Series IIe), the details of longshoremen's labor in the twentieth century (Series IIb – restricted until 2056), and the operations of the merchant marine during World War II (Series IIa and IId). Because the survival of various record types is spotty, however, most topics are only well documented for specific periods of time.

The series and sub-series in this collection are generally topical, in keeping with the company's organization schema. A detailed description of each subseries follows the series outline, below.

Series Description

Series I: Chase, Leavitt Co. Business Records, contains material directly related to the operation of the firm and its core functions as ship brokers and shipping agents. While most of this business involved making arrangements for other parties' vessels, Chase Leavitt did occasionally own or manage vessels directly. Those records are also filed here.

Series Ia, Ship Visit Files, contains records from ships that visited Portland between 1937 and 1983 which were represented by Chase, Leavitt. This subseries documents, in great detail, all the work involved in facilitating a vessel's arrival, loading, and departure from port. Types of documents include pilot bills, customs records, stevedore's bills, cargo loading plans, records of crew and supplies, insurance, protests of damaged cargo, accounts, and legal papers. The records are very nearly complete for the years 1951 to 1983, and arranged chronologically by the date of each vessel's expected visit. Note: many of the files from 1953 were missing from the original donation, but arrived with a later addition to the collection. These have not been integrated into the chronological list, but are filed at the end of this sub-series.

Series Ib, Charter Parties, contains charters that Chase, Leavitt negotiated for a wide variety of vessels. The bulk of these charter parties date between 1875 and 1912, though a few are from the end of the twentieth century. Many of the charters are for cargoes of lumber or sugar in the West Indies trade; grain is frequently represented as well. These are arranged chronologically.

Series Ic, Vessel Management, contains accounts, charter parties, bills of sale, crew lists, protests, and other records from vessels that the Chase, Leavitt Company directly owned or managed. Much of this subseries is related to the firm's management of six Percy & Small built coal schooners in the early 1920s, including the schooner Wyoming. Information on these schooners can also be found in correspondence (Series Ie). There are also substantial records from the bark P.C. Merryman in the 1880s and the schooner Olive T. Whittier at the turn of the twentieth century.

Series Id, General Shipping, contains a variety of material related to the movement of bulk commodities—apples, china clay, grain, lumber, and sulfur—into and out of Portland in the early twentieth century. Coverage in this subseries is uneven and frequently duplicates material also found in the company's correspondence (Series Ie) and elsewhere, but reflects the Chase, Leavitt Co.'s arrangement of the material. Detailed information on loading, cargo handling, and cargo distribution is found here. There are particularly detailed and extensive records of the firm's business with the Union Sulphur Company and with apple exporters.

Series Ie, Correspondence, contains portions of the company's correspondence from the 1890s, 1910s, early 1920s, and 1950s. Both incoming and outgoing correspondence is preserved, and the letters touch on all aspects of Chase, Leavitt Co's business abroad and in Portland. Major topics include ship arrivals, cargo handling and distribution, stevedoring and maritime labor, merchant mariners, and the sulfur, lumber, grain, and paper industries. Chase, Leavitt's management of the Frost fleet of coal schooners is also recorded. Correspondence dating between 1923 and 1926 makes up the bulk of this subseries.

Series If, Office Accounts, contains bills and invoices generated by the Chase, Leavitt Company in its daily operation from the 1890s through the 1950s. For the most part, these do not reference specific vessels, but instead deal with quotidian business expenses, charities, and fees charged for clearing small cargo consignments through customs. The few general ledgers and account books in this collection are also in this series.

Series II: Ancillary Business, contains material related to Chase, Leavitt Co.'s involvement with marine insurance, stevedoring, seamen's benevolent societies, wartime shipping, harbor development, and other activities related to shipping in Portland. For the most part, these reflect engagement with third-party entities as a result of Chase, Leavitt's position in Portland's maritime community, not business opportunities for the company itself. Material is arranged in subseries as follows:

Series IIa: Insurance and Inspection, contains records of Chase, Leavitt's activities as agents and surveyors for Lloyd's, the Bureau of American and Foreign Shipping, and other insurance organizations. The bulk of this subseries falls into two categories: correspondence between William Leavitt and various insurance and inspection agencies between 1905 and 1907, and correspondence with Lloyd's from 1927 and 1942. The latter includes detailed reports of maritime accidents and lists of ship movements into and out of Portland, including for the early years of World War II.

Series IIb: Stevedoring, contains material related to Chase, Leavitt's interactions with Portland's longshoremen in the twentieth century. The bulk of this subseries is material from the Portland Shipping Association, a group formed by Portland's shipping agencies to negotiate with the port's longshoremen's unions and to administer pensions, welfare, and other benefits to individual laborers. These records include financial reports, labor agreements, and records of hours worked by individual longshoremen from the 1950s to the early 1980s. [NOTE: these labor records are restricted until 2056.] These labor records are organized by port number, a numeric identifier assigned to every longshoremen employed in Portland. Subseries IIb also contains labor contracts negotiated in the early twentieth century, and some material from the Dirigo Stevedoring Co. and the Dugan Stevedoring Co.

Series IIc: Seamen's societies, contains records of the Leavitt family's involvement with the Portland Seamen's Friend Society, the United Seamen's Service, the National Association of Seamen's Welfare Agencies, and other local benevolent organizations. The bulk of this series dates from 1940 to 1947, and deals with local efforts to provide services to merchant seamen during World War II. They also record national efforts to promote seamen's welfare and social programs for a professionalizing labor force. There is also a series of checks from the Portland Marine Society, dated 1887-1901, made out to seamen's widows and other beneficiaries of the society.

Series IId: Wartime Shipping, contains records of federal involvement with merchant shipping during World War I and World War II. Material from WWI is limited to a single volume of accounts from ships operated by the US Shipping Board. Material from WWII is more extensive, covering the War Shipping Administration's regulation of merchant shipping and cargo handling.

Series IIe: Harbor Development, contains records of various public and private development projects proposed or completed from 1929 to 2000. Projects range from commercial infrastructure improvements to plans for waterfront hotels and amusement parks, and involve a variety of local, state, and federal agencies. Most are centered on Portland, but some address other Maine ports. As a whole, this subseries reflects nearly a century change in attitudes, commerce, and infrastructure for the Port of Portland.

Series IIf: Harbor Infrastructure, contains a few documents related to other maritime businesses in Portland that contributed to the port's shipping facilities. These include the Portland Drydock Company and the Cape Elizabeth Marine Railway, both active in the 1860s, and a log-book for the tugs Rebecca and Fannie J. from the 1960s. The relationship of these firms to Chase, Leavitt Co. is unclear.

Series IIg: Maritime Education, contains records of Ralph A. Leavitt's efforts to improve marine education in Maine. The subseries documents operations and events at Maine Maritime Academy in the early 1960s, Leavitt's efforts to start an oceanography program at a Maine university, and a few papers from the Maine Vocational-Technical Institute.

Series III: Personal, contains assorted personal and domestic records of various members of the firm. Two individuals are particularly well represented: Peter Hanna (1805-1879) and Ralph A. Leavitt (1889-1977). Peter Hanna was a shipmaster and father-in-law to William (1824-1911) and Edward M. Leavitt. Documents from Peter Hanna are primarily correspondence and accounts, which deal with matters of global shipping and Leavitt family business during the Civil War. There is less family material from Ralph A. Leavitt; surviving documents instead relate to his longstanding investment in the Port of Portland. Other family members are documented in brief, largely through their various maritime endeavors. The series is organized by generation.

Series IV: Published Material, contains ephemera, newspaper clippings, and other published miscellanea that arrived with the Chase, Leavitt Co. papers. Material in this series is not directly connected with any manuscript material, but reflects the firm's interests and the milieu of maritime business in which it operated.
